Hello, my name is Amy and my artist practice usually involves work about my family history, which is primarily from Southampton. I make this work as a way to reconnect with the city I am from and to the people I came from. I would describe myself as a 'maker' because I like to look at archival material and family photos to remake objects from the past. These objects are made with a degree of precision -- people that have seen my work don't realise that I've actually made it with my own hands. The objects and spaces I make are used as props to invite conversation, engagement, or even just a hang-out space for people to enjoy.
